

Validation user login

Java program that demonstrates user login validation. This program takes a username and password as input and checks them against predefined values for demonstration purposes. In a real-world scenario, you would typically check against a database or some external authentication service. The program compares the entered username and password with predefined valid values. In a real-world application, you would replace the validation logic with appropriate mechanisms, such as checking against a database or an authentication service.